COURSE OBJECTIVES

This is an engaging and comprehensive exploration of the early history and theoretical aspects of film and media. The course delves into various influential movements and cinematic styles, including German Expressionism, Film Noir, Italian Neorealism, the Western, Experimental, and Surrealist cinemas. Furthermore, the rise of related media forms, such as radio and television, will be examined in the context of their impact on early film and media development. Through in-depth analysis and critical discussions, students will gain a profound understanding of the evolution of film and media, providing them with a solid foundation for further exploration in the field.

Upon Completion of this Course, students will be able to:

1. understand and articulate the intellectual and historically specific contexts of key ideas in film theory;
2. engage in close critical reading of key texts and challenge the ideas presented therein;
3. understand key concepts and contexts to specific films from different periods of film history;
4. understand and engage with the relations and tensions between distinct theoretical perspectives in film thinking.
