COURSE OBJECTIVES

Health Psychology is an introductory course that explores the intersection of psychological factors and health. It examines how psychological processes influence physical health, illness prevention, and healthcare outcomes. Students will learn about the model of health and the application of psychological theories and research in promoting health and well-being. The course covers various topics, including stress and coping, health behaviors, patient-provider interactions, and the psychological impact of chronic illness.

Upon Completion of this Course, students will be able to:

1. Understand the key concepts and theories in health psychology.
2. Analyze the biopsychosocial factors that contribute to health and well-being.
3. Evaluate the impact of psychological factors on health behaviors and outcomes.
4. Apply evidence-based strategies to promote health and prevent illness.
5. Critically examine the role of psychological interventions in healthcare settings.
6. Develop skills in research methods and critical thinking related to health psychology.
