COURSE OBJECTIVES

This course provides an in-depth exploration of the social construction of gender and its impact on individuals, relationships, and societies. Drawing from sociological theories and research, students will critically examine the intersections of gender with other social categories such as race, class, sexuality, and age. Topics of study include the historical and cultural variations in gender roles, feminist theories, gender inequality, gender socialization, gendered institutions, and gender activism. Through readings, discussions, and assignments, students will develop a nuanced understanding of the complex ways in which gender shapes our lives and societies.

Upon Completion of this Course, students will be able to:

1. Understand the social construction of gender and its implications for individuals and societies
2. Analyze the intersections of gender with other social categories, such as race, class, and sexuality
3. Critically evaluate theoretical perspectives on gender and their implications for social inequality
4. Examine the role of gender in shaping various social institutions, including family, education, work, and media
5. Engage in respectful and inclusive discussions on gender equality and social change
